Summary: Today, young women and girls need female mentors to help them survive along the path to maturity. In For All Our Daughters, Pegine Echevarria tells how to mentor using the powerful personal process she developed through her own experiences and her work with thousands of young women and girls. She shares her personal trials and triumphs growing up in a neglectful and abusive family and includes mentoring anecdotes from prominent individuals. Mentoring is an opportunity to impact a life, and Echevarria explains the five essential ways mentors can influence young women and girls by sharing their thoughts and experiences: intellectually, fiscally, physically, emotionally, and spiritually. This landmark book reveals for the first time a process that any and all women can use to help young women and girls succeed and become well-rounded.
